DISABLED PEOPLE PROBLEMS @ UNIVERSITY

There are superintelligent people who want to join Universities. They have problems, however, because their disabilities make enrollment just too hard.

Meet Gabi, Ana, and Fabio, three great minds struggling to live just like normal people do.

Where you see stairs, Gabi sees the greatest of obstacles

Gabi had an accident in which she lost her leg. Many facilities, including schools, do not have any solutions for her. This University, however, has it.

Let me help you with that elevator!

All it takes is a smile and willingness to help!

And an elevator installed by your stairs.

Fabio

This man is intelligent and hard working. He wants to be an engineer. Or a DJ. Where you see information board, Fabio sees nothing, because he is blind.

SPECIALIST

This University installed speaker system for the blind that reads out the information from the board to them.

They also have Braille alphabet versions of information, as well as friendly and willing staff.

This is Ana, future pharmacist, and possibly the inventor of anti-cancer vaccination. She is sad, because she has no idea what are those people talking about.

Ana was born deaf.

Ana decides to take a look at the information board, she saw a blind guy next to it few moments ago.

Oh yes! That is just what Ana needs! This will be a nice day after all.

sign language

This University hires handsome people knowing the sign language. This way, Ana does not feel sad anymore, because she has someone to sign to.

The disabilities are not problems. What is really wrong, is that we seem not to notice them.

There are Universities (like the one presented) which main goal is to make all attendants equal. Simple things like installation of elevators, implementation of sound systems, and hiring people of diverse skill can make peoples' dreams come true, and the access to information easier.
