Being part of the EU brings many benefits for its youth. EU has created multiple programs for youth participants, which are for example volunteering or working abroad. Regarding studies, there is the Erasmus program, for studying abroad for a specific period of time. In this case, the studies can be done only in an EU country, and the Erasmus program will provide the student with allowance according to the destination country. In addition, there are youth exchanges and training programs., which are not part of the school organisations and usually last about a week. Normally the youth that participate in these programs are from the age 15 up to 30. The EU will give the participant reimbursements for transportation costs, accommodation and food are provided. These programs re about discussing problems among youth that are occurring around the world at the time. All these programs are especially suitable for people who like to socialise and are not afraid to meet new people from around the world. Participating in any of these programs will help you to learn more about yourself, through being able to manage yourself in a completely new environment. Its about stepping out of your comfort zone.The possibilities to work or volunteer are all over Europe and one can choose a desirable destination.

Volunteering programs often also have exotic destinations in their available lists, such as working with elephants in India or diving with turtles in Philippines. You can go for as long as starting from a week to 12months at a time. Usually the people stay longer in the destinations that are far. Normally, the projects are not as funded as the previous mentioned programmes, since the volunteer must pay a fee for participation in the program. The programs are a way to discover aspects of yourself that you didn't even know existed and are very likely to change you towards a better you.

Dangers and Tips of starting your own business

Having your own business is nowadays most peoples hope and dream. However, one cant just jump into it, some relevant preparation is necessary prior.

Aspects to consider when opening your own business are that, firstly, you might not succeed at first. Don't let this bring you down, because the first years are always the hardest. A professional business plan must be created for the business in order to have the plan set. You must know all the legal issues, permits, fees, taxes and so on. One must find sponsors, persuade investors or take a loan from the bank for necessary start up cost. Having right connections will bring you numerous benefits in the business field.

Another danger would be the competition in the market. There might already be a similar company or idea in the market, rising the level of failing. The person thinking of opening their own business must consider the competition, opening as a new business for an idea that is already successful would not be such a great idea. Another aspect to consider is to take a fellow partner who is business-minded into the start up with you. Together it is easier to start and solving problems becomes much simpler. Then again, that means there are two people responsible for the company and must share the costs.
